'Nankin' C. reticulata. Before 1700. Large, deep crimson semi-double, with large, fluted and waved petals. Originated in Japan. (Another form of this cultivar—large pink, semi-double with waved and fluted petals is thought to be the cultivar synonymous with 'Captain Rawes'—see Dr. Emmerts article on page 11.

'Yamanoi-kasuri' C. japonica. Before 1700. White with a rare patch of red. Small, urn-shaped, semi-double. Originated in Japan. Believed extinct.

Descriptions of these camellias were taken from The International Camellia Register published by the International Camellia Society, 1993.
